1. What are some factors in our sources for Thales that could mislead us about Thales’ ideas if we did not consider them critically?

2. McKirahan claims that Thales’ chief importance is in his theory about water—a theory that is not immediately useful or correct in any way, when seen from our point of view. What are the most compelling reasons to agree with McKirahan, and how compelling are they?